

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. You can search through the full text of this book on the web at <http://books.google.com/>

815

B219

bEc

UC-NRLF

QB 318 253

YB 54590

815

B219
65c

Charming Léandre: a
Comedy in One Act:
by Théodore de Ban-
ville: Translated by Bar-
rett H. Clark

Samuel French: Publisher
28-30 West Thirty-eighth Street: New York

PRICE TWENTY-FIVE CENTS

THE WORLD'S BEST PLAYS
BY CELEBRATED EUROPEAN AUTHORS

BARRETT H. CLARK

GENERAL EDITOR

Charming Léandre: a
Comedy in One Act:
by Théodore de Ban-
ville: Translated by Bar-
rett H. Clark

Samuel French: Publisher

28-30 West Thirty-eighth Street: New York

COPYRIGHT, 1915.
By SAMUEL FRENCH

*THE MIDWINTER
GUEST*

CHARMING LEANDRE

PERSONS REPRESENTED

ORGON, an old and crabbed tradesman.

COLOMBINE, his daughter, a pretty and coquettish young woman.

LÉANDRE, COLOMBINE's lover.

The Scene: Paris, about 1720.

THEODORE DE BANVILLE

Théodore de Banville (1823-1891) was a poet endowed with delicacy of feeling and charm. His numerous little plays, nearly all in verse, are delightful vignettes of old French life. Nearly always he went to French history, tradition, or literature for his plots. GRINGOIRE, for instance, one of his best known, is a poetic play built round the half-legendary story of the old poet Gringoire; the present sketch, on the other hand, is a purely imaginary trifle, laid in early Eighteenth Century Paris.

As the translation of poetry is practically impossible, it has been deemed wise to cast LE BEAU LÉANDRE in more or less colloquial prose.

The setting is fully described in the stage-directions. The costumes are of the period.

CHARMING LEANDRE

A deserted square in the neighborhood of the Luxembourg Gardens. At the back, through the iron gate, a part of the Palace is seen, half-obscured by heavy foliage. The sides of the stage represent old houses; down-stage on either side are old walls, covered with creeping vines and flowers. Down-stage to the right in ORGON's house, style of Louis XV, in red-brick; it has a balcony extending from the French-windows on the second story. Just above this house the garden wall is seen. Down-stage to the left is a marble bench, part of which is broken. The sky begins to brighten, the roofs of the houses are touched with the reflection of the rising sun.

LÉANDRE appears at the back, dances about the stage, then stops in front of ORGON's house, looks up at it longingly, then comes down-stage and declaims:)

LÉANDRE. Cupid, thou it is who hast wakened me at this hour when Aurora tinges with pink the gates of the East. (Turning toward ORGON's house) I salute thee, dear abode of the star before which the sun itself seems pale! Dear star of my eyes, sweet and charming Colombine!—Happy Léandre, handsome Léandre, lucky Léandre!—But—marry her? It's a grave question! And she hasn't a sou! Hm!—Let us awaken her! But how? What trick—? Break a window? Sing a song? That very obnoxious old gentleman, Orgon, might come, and pick a quarrel—the devil!

6 CHARMING LÉANDRE.

I have it: I'll cry "Fire!" If he appears, I'll run away, but if she appears, I shall stay—intoxicated with happiness! (He goes up-stage and cries "Fire!") Fire! Help! Help! You'll burn to death!

(COLOMBINE appears on the balcony.)

COLOMBINE. Good Heavens, what's all this noise?

LÉANDRE. Fire!

COLOMBINE. (Catching sight of LÉANDRE) It's you, Léandre? Where, if you please, is the fire?

LÉANDRE. In my heart! In your eyes! It cannot be extinguished.

COLOMBINE. Flatterer—I do not believe you!—And the wedding—when is it to be?

LÉANDRE. (Pretending to be in great despair) Your fatal charms! Ah, heart of snow!

COLOMBINE. When is the wedding day?

LÉANDRE. (Aside) She insists!—(To COLOMBINE) Thou charming daughter of the Heavens, may it be soon! My intentions are no less pure than the ethereal blue!

COLOMBINE. Then let us get married.

LÉANDRE. (Standing on the bench in order to speak more easily) My dear Colombine, the Fates unite to pester people who are married. We have both seen married folk come to fell disaster. Think well!

COLOMBINE. I care not a whit for the Fates—nor for this nonsense you are talking. No marriage—no love!

LÉANDRE. (Coming down from the bench) Cruel—let me at least make love to you!

COLOMBINE. I can't trust you!

LÉANDRE. (Drawing his sword) My despair will drive me to—I'm going—

COLOMBINE. Ask my father's permission. I like to be clear in matters of this sort.

LÉANDRE. He will refuse!

COLOMBINE. Then I wash my hands of everything. Tell him one of those pretty stories you tell me— Au revoir. (She retires, closing the window after her. LÉANDRE stands for a moment, plunged in uncertainty, then he comes down-stage)

LÉANDRE. Ah? Well, what if I did marry her, after all? It is indeed serious. I never thought I should go to Cythera's Isle accompanied by two witnesses and a notary!—And yet, Colombine is careful, a good housekeeper, clever—I never knew anyone so industrious. When I look at her as a lover, all's well, but as a husband—hm? Here comes her good father!

(ORGON comes forth from his house, talking to himself, and not seeing LÉANDRE.)

ORGON. These confounded clothes! Every motion I make, I burst something—bah! Holes big enough to put one's fist through! Now, how can I manage to replace the material, without paying for it myself? Some friend, some scholar—? (Catching sight of LÉANDRE) Ah, Léandre! I'll pretend not to notice him—he gets on my nerves!

LÉANDRE. Salutations, Seigneur Orgon!

ORGON. (Pretending not to recognize him) I have no small change—and I never give to the poor.

LÉANDRE. Are you making fun of me?

ORGON. (As before) Never. I never give—on week-days or holidays.

LÉANDRE. (Insisting) Seigneur Orgon, pray don't be so obstinate. I have come here—

ORGON. Nonsense.

LÉANDRE. To say good morning to you.

ORGON. Rubbish.

LÉANDRE. Only a word—

ORGON. I have nothing to say to you.

LÉANDRE. I must——

ORGON. No!

LÉANDRE. I should have liked——

ORGON. Hush!

LÉANDRE. But let me tell you who I am! I am Léandre!

ORGON. (Now pretending to recognize him—good-naturedly) Ah, so it's you, Léandre? My dear Léandre! I must confess, I took you at first for some beggar.

LÉANDRE. Only too happy!

ORGON. What do you want?

LÉANDRE. (Aside) I must be pleasant! (Aloud) You look particularly well this morning!

ORGON. I look like a man who wants to take a little walk before his own door-step. And you too look remarkably well. Thank you. Good day.

LÉANDRE. (Catching hold of his arm) I love a rare and exquisite creature: it brightens the whole earth——

ORGON. (Trying to get away) Yes? And what can I do?

LÉANDRE. Her forehead is like the pearls of the sea, her hair is seraphs' gold; not the pearls of paradise can compare with her teeth, the Red Sea is nothing compared with her lips!

ORGON. Then take her to the jeweler's, my dear fellow. If that is true, he will give you a tremendous price.

LÉANDRE. The woman I adore, the woman I——let us be frank—You have a daughter?

ORGON. No. I never had one.

LÉANDRE. Ah, yes you have!

ORGON. No.

LÉANDRE. Yes.

ORGON. No. Now, I must be going!

LÉANDRE. Please don't!

ORGON. I must.

LÉANDRE. You have Colombine.

ORGON. Ah, Colombine! The angel—although she does worry and bother me at times. In this old quarter of the city she keeps house for me: cooks to perfection and mends my clothes. The darling—with her bright eyes, her flowing tresses, I—I declare that she is not for you. I refuse you. And now, run off!

LÉANDRE. (Kneeling) My dear Orgon, see: I am kneeling!

ORGON. Stop it! Now be off!

LÉANDRE. Heart of stone, thrice-barbarous father, what have you against me?

ORGON. You are something of a philanderer.

LÉANDRE. Pure affectation on my part!

ORGON. You will be hanged some day.

LÉANDRE. I? By the feet, or the neck?

ORGON. Your escapades are well known.

LÉANDRE. Seigneur, grant me, I beg you, the object of my affections! She will reform me!

ORGON. She is not for you!

LÉANDRE. (Drawing his sword—tragically) Thou formidable blade, weapon of my ancestors, bathed in the blood of thousands, protector of innocence, terror of craven hearts, fly quick to the bosom of thy master. Lay the blame for this dark act at Orgon's door. Or if, Oh loyal friend, thou shrinkest from the deed, let me fly for my pistols!

ORGON. But—Colombine—?

LÉANDRE. That charm for my eyes, that star which holds my heart in subjugation, that adorable tyrant to whom I say: Command, I obey!—

ORGON. Do you know what dowry I am giving her?

LÉANDRE. No.

ORGON. Do you prefer lands or cash?

LÉANDRE. Either one will content me.

ORGON. Cash is, I think better.

LÉANDRE. But of course, land does not vary as a cash income is likely to do.

ORGON. Now let me tell you: I intend to marry Colombine off without a dowry.—Save your sword and spare your tears for other amours.

LÉANDRE. (Aside) The devil! (Aloud) I adore her so, I care for nothing but her lovely self!

ORGON. Good.

LÉANDRE. With her, I could not hope to achieve a greater happiness on earth.

ORGON. You have money perhaps?

LÉANDRE. None with me.

ORGON. But—elsewhere? You have?

LÉANDRE. I? I have expectations: certain documents in my library lead me to believe that hypothetical—

ORGON. Why not speak of it, then? Shake hands! (LÉANDRE appears very joyful) But Colombine is not for you!

LÉANDRE. (Aside) What an obstinate old fellow he is!

ORGON. Now let us talk reason: do you imagine that I have gone to all the trouble and expense of bringing up this girl, and am now willing to allow her to be taken from me without receiving a single sou of what I have paid out?

LÉANDRE. A good father—

ORGON. I understand; a good father thinks himself sufficiently rewarded by the love of his children. I don't begrudge what I have given her, my dear Léandre, but I do intend that my son-in-law shall bring some money into the family.

LÉANDRE. And how much?

ORGON. I know you are an indigent young scamp, that your allowance is miserable; and I am willing to make a special offer: one hundred crowns. (Aside) He can never scrape together so much!

LÉANDRE. (In consternation) A hundred crowns! I should have to hold up the Auxerre coach!

ORGON. Now, let us make an end to this. Here is my last word: a hundred crowns, or no marriage!

LÉANDRE. A hundred crowns!

ORGON. A hundred crowns. (ORGON turns to go, but returns)

LÉANDRE. Alas, fatal day! Where can I find such wealth? He might just as well have asked for a million. What can I do?

ORGON. (Who has come to LÉANDRE) Well, have you weighed well the offer?

LÉANDRE. (Hesitating) Seigneur——

ORGON. Only a hundred crowns.—A hundred crowns.—A hundred crowns.

LÉANDRE. (Resolutely) You will have them in no time.

ORGON. Until we meet again! (Aside) A good piece of business, this! (He goes into his house)

LÉANDRE. Under what celestial dome, in what hemisphere, can I unearth this heap of sun-bright crowns? What dark cave holds such a treasure?—My family? Hah! My friends? As well knock on a drum, or seek for flowers on a house-top! Friends are like an umbrella, one never has one when he needs it! But Colombine? I might ask her? I never hesitated before, and why should I now? I must show her that I am not ungrateful!

(COLOMBINE comes gaily in.)

COLOMBINE. How are you, my knight?

LÉANDRE. (Aside) Here is my money! (LÉANDRE sits down on the bench and buries his face in his hands. He appears to be in dire despair)

COLOMBINE. (Wishing to show her dress to LÉANDRE) Do you think I look nice? (LÉANDRE does not move) You might at least smile at me! Truly, I was only joking this morning, when I was so rude to you. Come, make love to me. Do you still love your little Colombine?

LÉANDRE. (Tragically) Oh, cruel Destiny!

COLOMBINE. Are you still thinking of this morning? I tell you, it was only in fun.

LÉANDRE. Oh, what a misfortune! Terrible!

COLOMBINE. What is the matter? Have you seen my father?

LÉANDRE. (Mechanically) Your father?

COLOMBINE. Yes—tell me, I am so anxious to hear everything!

LÉANDRE. Alas, I have matters vastly more serious to think of than that!

COLOMBINE. Why do you wring your hands?

LÉANDRE. (With an air of profound melancholy) The wise man was right who said that life here below was one long martyrdom, and that an abyss was hidden in each of its thorny paths. (Crying out) A frightful abyss!

COLOMBINE. Heavens, this is terrible! What is the trouble?

LÉANDRE. (With a long face) I have a brother——

COLOMBINE. I didn't know that.

LÉANDRE. With lovely golden hair. I loved him so——

COLOMBINE. Is he dead?

LÉANDRE. (Quietly) No. (In exaltation) Oh, dread misfortune! We were as fingers to the hand——

COLOMBINE. Heavens, tell me!

LÉANDRE. What can I do, but throw myself into some deep pit?

COLOMBINE. But tell me——

LÉANDRE. I cannot.

COLOMBINE. Come now. This brother——

LÉANDRE. A good friend has written me this letter—(He pretends to look for a letter) which is drenched in my tears!

COLOMBINE. Well?

LÉANDRE. The poor boy lived in Messina. He was in love. One day, when he was far from his friends, and with the object of his affections, he went out in a boat. Far from shore, they were met by barbarian pirates——

COLOMBINE. And taken prisoners?

LÉANDRE. Exactly.—My poor nephew!

COLOMBINE. What nephew? I thought you said your brother?

LÉANDRE. No, it was my nephew.

COLOMBINE. Ah!

LÉANDRE. And the worst of it is, they took them to Tunis, I think, or one of the neighboring ports. My poor cousin, he lost an eye in the fray——

COLOMBINE. You said it was your nephew?

LÉANDRE. Did I? My grief makes me forget the details. When I am talking about Octave, I cannot be held responsible for such things.

COLOMBINE. I can well imagine!

LÉANDRE. And the way they treated him—(Again looking for the letter) I have the letter—where?—Well, they set him to work sawing wood on a barren rock——

COLOMBINE. How barbarous!

LÉANDRE. And no one would ransom him. Now, if I fail to get a hundred crowns in an hour's time, he will perish at the hands of the Turks——

COLOMBINE. He shall not perish! You may count on one true friend in your hour of need. When do you say you must have the money?

LÉANDRE. Immediately.

COLOMBINE. You shall have it, never fear.

LÉANDRE. (Pretending not to have heard) If necessary, I shall go myself to the coasts of Tunis. If I find the unfortunate couple lost——

COLOMBINE. No, no: saved!—Come back in an instant!

LÉANDRE. You insist, then?

COLOMBINE. (Extending her hand to him) Live!

LÉANDRE. (Taking her hand and kissing it) For your sake! (He goes out)

COLOMBINE. My father calls me good-for-nothing when I accept presents from lovers. Now at least he can't reproach me, for I'm going to give to this lover. Here comes my father! (ORGON comes in and goes toward COLOMBINE) How well you are looking to-day, Father!

ORGON. Yes.

COLOMBINE. You'll live at least two hundred years!

ORGON. I hope so.

COLOMBINE. What, now, would you say, if I—you are so obliging!—were to ask you to loan some money?

ORGON. Hm! Loan you money?

COLOMBINE. (Smoothing ORGON's hair) Your hair is so untidy!

ORGON. I'm not going to a ball. I think I look quite respectable. No, I'll never loan you money.

COLOMBINE. A hundred crowns?

ORGON. Ha! To enrich some good-for-nothing? Put it out of your mind this instant. I wouldn't give you a half-crown!

COLOMBINE. (Gaily) Oh, yes, you would!

ORGON. Nor five sous. Remember that.

COLOMBINE. I know where you have buried your treasure—in the garden—I'll go and unearth it.

ORGON. Spare yourself that trouble; it's under lock and key!

COLOMBINE. I understand your feelings, but let me tell you that this is a question of honor. If I told you it was a question of your own daughter's honor—a hundred crowns?

ORGON. I am a good father, and your honor is dear to me above all else. Still, I shall keep my hundred crowns.

COLOMBINE. You could easily get them!

ORGON. Of course—to put them to better use. I can find them,—but I can keep them, too.

COLOMBINE. Listen to me: I always try to talk pleasantly and quietly with you, but you invariably interrupt me and make absurd excuses. (She cries) Then, I must throw myself into the Seine! I will, I will!

ORGON. You will be fished out.

COLOMBINE. Your white hairs will be ashamed of what I'll do.

ORGON. My white hairs have never blushed yet!

COLOMBINE. And I——

ORGON. Shh! I hear footsteps!

COLOMBINE. I won't hush! Tell me, who mends your clothes? Who tends the kitchen—?

ORGON. You, my dearest.

COLOMBINE. Ah!

ORGON. I realize how much I owe you, but——

COLOMBINE. I furnish a table for you like an ambassador's—and you give me next to nothing for doing all this! I beg and implore you, but you don't even pay for the dresses I wear!

ORGON. (Anxiously) Colombine, my dearest!

COLOMBINE. You never realized what I was worth!

ORGON. Oh, yes!

COLOMBINE. From now on I shall leave you to your valets!

ORGON. Pity me, my dear child!

COLOMBINE. They'll rob you, give you under-cooked meats, bad wine——

ORGON. Oh, Colombine—my treasure, listen to me: you—you have persuaded me. I shall get you the money. (COLOMBINE starts to speak, but ORGON interrupts her) No! I don't want to know what you are going to do with it!

COLOMBINE. That would be wisest!

ORGON. (Aside) The audacity!

COLOMBINE. (Aside) Especially as I should never have thought of telling him!

ORGON. (Aside) Well, I'll give her the hundred crowns Léandre is to bring me!

COLOMBINE. (Aside) Thanks be to Cupid! Léandre is saved! (Enter LÉANDRE at the back) Here he is! Ah!

ORGON. (Aside, as he catches sight of LÉANDRE) Good!

COLOMBINE. (To ORGON, as she offers her hand) Father, give me the hundred crowns.

ORGON. (To COLOMBINE) At once! (He motions to LÉANDRE, who comes close to him, and says, as he stretches forth his hand:) My hundred crowns?

LÉANDRE. Of course—immediately.

COLOMBINE. (To ORGON) Then give them to me!

ORGON. (To COLOMBINE) Yes—(To LÉANDRE) Pray don't run away, I want my hundred crowns!

LÉANDRE. (To ORGON) Of course! I have them!

ORGON. (To LÉANDRE) Come, then!

LÉANDRE. (To ORGON) Never fear! (He crosses over and stands by COLOMBINE, with outstretched hand) The money?

COLOMBINE. (To ORGON) Give it to me.

ORGON. (Who thinks LÉANDRE is still at his side) Give it to me.

LÉANDRE. (To COLOMBINE) Well?

ORGON. (As before) Well?

LÉANDRE. (As before) Well?

COLOMBINE. (As before) Well?

ORGON. (Bursting forth angrily) God save me, where are my hundred crowns?

LÉANDRE. (To COLOMBINE, aloud) Where are yours?

COLOMBINE. (To ORGON) And where are yours?

ORGON. What is the matter with them? (Aloud to LÉANDRE) Did you not promise to bring me the money at once?

LÉANDRE. (Aloud to ORGON) The money I promised you—

COLOMBINE. (Seeing how matters stand—to ORGON) Is the money that you promised to give me.

ORGON. And I counted on him!

COLOMBINE. (To LÉANDRE) Then Messina—your brother Octave—the corsairs—?

LÉANDRE. Fairy-tales to win you!

ORGON. You are a pair of rascally swindlers! You both deserve my malediction.

COLOMBINE. Father—!

ORGON. (Aside) It's high time, though, my daughter was married. She'll wriggle from between my fingers like an eel, sooner or later. (Aloud) Marry then—money is not necessary for happiness.

LÉANDRE. (Aside) Then this marriage will be an affair of honor! (Aloud to ORGON) Monsieur Orgon, I know what it must cost you to be separated from so charming a daughter. You dislike, too, my easy manners and my shiftless mode of living. You have no good opinion of me. (He pushes COLOMBINE into ORGON's arms) I give her back to you!

ORGON. (To LÉANDRE) Generous lover, she will be yours. (He throws her into LÉANDRE's arms)

LÉANDRE. Keep her, I beg you, I have determined not to take her from you. I could not do it! (He in turn sends COLOMBINE back to her father)

ORGON. (Returning her) Nor I!

COLOMBINE. (Disengaging herself) If you please! You'll surely hurt yourselves. Really, your fine sentiments are going a little too far! (Aside to LÉANDRE) Marry me, Léandre, and have done with all this. I know where my father's treasure is hidden. I'll tell you all about it.

LÉANDRE. I too know about it. My dear love!

COLOMBINE. (To ORGON) He accepts.

ORGON. Good; now I am satisfied. There is nothing so good and respectable as marriage.

COLOMBINE. Every one at last is——

LÉANDRE. Happy!

ORGON. (To LÉANDRE, prophetically) You will be! (Pointing to his house) Come, let us celebrate the event.

COLOMBINE. (To the audience) Mesdames and Messieurs, the play is over. If our poet has indulged in a trifle too boisterous gaiety, please remember that laughter is the true sign of our French commonsense!

CURTAIN.

THE WORLD'S BEST PLAYS

By Celebrated European Authors

A NEW SERIES OF AMATEUR PLAYS BY THE BEST
AUTHORS, ANCIENT AND MODERN, ESPECIALLY
TRANSLATED WITH HISTORICAL NOTES, SUG-GESTIONS FOR STAGING, Etc., FOR THE
USE OF SCHOOLS, COLLEGES, AND DRAMATIC CLUBS

BARRETT H. CLARK

General Editor

WITH the immensely increased demand for new plays for purposes of production by amateurs comes a correspondingly great demand for a careful selection of those plays which can be easily and well presented by clubs and colleges. The plays in the present series have been chosen with regard to their intrinsic value as drama and literature, and at the same time to their adaptability to the needs and limitations of such organizations.

The Series, under the personal supervision of Mr. Barrett H. Clark, instructor in the department of Dramatic Literature at Chautauqua, New York, assistant stage manager and actor with Mrs. Fiske (season 1912-1913), now comprises ten volumes, and fifteen more will make their appearance during the year. Eventually there will be plays from ancient Greece and Rome, Italy, Spain, France, Russia, Germany, and the Scandinavian countries, representative of some of the best drama of all ages and lands.

Each volume is prefaced by a concise historical note by Mr. Clark, and with a few suggestions for staging.

Plays Now Ready

INDIAN SUMMER, a comedy in one act by MEILHAC and HALEVY. This little play, by two of the most famous writers of comedy of the last century, has been played at the Comédie Française at Paris for upwards of forty years, and remains one of the brightest and most popular works of the period. PRICE 25 CENTS.

ROSALIE, by MAX MAUREY. A "Grand Guignol" comedy in one act, full of verve and clever dialogue. Rosalie, the stubborn maid, leads her none too amiable master and mistress into uncomfortable complications by refusing to open the front door to a supposed guest of wealth and influence. PRICE 25 CENTS.

MODESTY, by PAUL HERVIEU. A delightful trifle by one of the most celebrated of living dramatists. PRICE 25 CENTS.

THE ART OF BEING BORED, (Le Monde où l'on s'Ennuie), a comedy in three acts by EDOUARD PAILLERON. Probably the best-known and most frequently acted comedy of manners in the realm of nineteenth century French drama. It is replete with wit and comic situations. For nearly forty years it has held the stage, while countless imitators have endeavored to reproduce its freshness and charm. PRICE 25 CENTS.

A MARRIAGE PROPOSAL, by ANTON TCHÉKHOFF, a comedy in one act, by one of the greatest of modern Russian writers. This little farce is very popular in Russia, and satirizes the peasants of that country in an amusing manner. PRICE 25 CENTS.

THE GREEN COAT, by ALFRED DE MUSSET and EMILE AUGIER. A slight and comic character sketch of the life of Bohemian artists in Paris, written by one of France's greatest poets and one of her best-known dramatists. PRICE 25 CENTS.

THE WAGER, by GIUSEPPE GIACOSA. This one act poetic comedy, written by the most celebrated dramatist of modern Italy, was the author's first work. It treats of a wager made by a proud young page, who risks his life on the outcome of a game of chess. PRICE 25 CENTS.

THE LITTLE SHEPHERDESS, a poetic comedy in one act, by ANDRÉ RIVOIRE. A charming pastoral sketch by a well-known French poet and dramatist. Played with success at the Comédie Française. PRICE 25 CENTS.

PHORMIO, a Latin comedy by TERENCE. An up-to-date version of the famous comedy. One of the masterpieces of Latin drama; the story of a father who returns to find that his son has married a slave girl. Phormio, the parasite-villain who causes the numerous comic complications, succeeds in unraveling the difficulties, and all ends happily. PRICE 25 CENTS.

THE TWINS, a Latin farce by PLAUTUS, upon which Shakespeare founded his Comedy of Errors. PRICE 25 CENTS.

THE BOOR, by ANTON TOCHKOFF. A well-known farce by the celebrated Russian master; it is concerned with Russian peasants, and portrays with masterly skill the comic side of country life. PRICE 25 CENTS.

THE BLACK PEARL, by VICTORIEN SARDOU. One of Sardou's most famous comedies of intrigue. A house has, it is thought, been robbed. But through skilful investigation it is found that the havoc wrought has been done by lightning. PRICE 25 CENTS.

CHARMING LEANDRE, by THEODORE DE BANVILLE. The author of "Gringoire" is here seen in a poetic vein, yet the Frenchman's innate sense of humor recalls, in this satirical little play, the genius of Molière. PRICE 25 CENTS.

THE POST-SCRIPTUM, by EMILE AUGIER. Of this one-act comedy Professor Brander Matthews writes: " . . . one of the brightest and most brilliant little one-act comedies in any language, and to be warmly recommended to American readers." PRICE 25 CENTS.

THE HOUSE OF FOURCHAMBAULT, by EMILE AUGIER. One of the greatest of recent French family dramas. Although the play is serious in tone, it contains touches which entitle it to a position among the best comedies of manners of the times. PRICE 25 CENTS.

THE DOCTOR IN SPIKE OF HIMSELF, by MOLIERE. A famous farce by the greatest of French dramatists. Sganarelle has to be beaten before he will acknowledge that he is a doctor, which he is not. He then works apparently miraculous cures. The play is a sharp satire on the medical profession in the 17th Century. PRICE 25 CENTS.

BRIGNOL AND HIS DAUGHTER, by CAPUS. The first comedy in English of the most sprightly and satirical of present-day French dramatists. PRICE 25 CENTS.

CHOOSING A CAREER, by G. A. DE CAILLAVET. Written by one of the authors of "Love Watches." A farce of mistaken identity, full of humorous situations and bright lines. PRICE 25 CENTS.

FRENCH WITHOUT A MASTER, by TRISTAN BERNARD. A clever farce by one of the most successful of French dramatists. It is concerned with the difficulties of a bogus-interpreter who does not know a word of French. PRICE 25 CENTS.

PATER NOSTER, a poetic play in one act, by FRANCOISE COFFEE. A pathetic incident of the time of the Paris Commune in 1871. PRICE 25 CENTS.

Gaylord J
Maker
Tracuse,
SAT. JAN. 21,

UCLA
INTERLIBRARY LOAN

MAR 18 1979

MAY 31 1979

306836
Banville

UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA LIBRARY

